

The North

Description:

found by norse explorers, this land is as cold as it gets, the end of the North. These cold conditions apply certain clothing and equipment. Axes, shields, heavy clothing, lots of fur and hunting foxes or polar bears. Not a lot of trading goes on between these two colonies, and outside support can only be done by boat. These two colonies are always at war and are never settled until one conquers the other

To go more into detail about the description, each colonies have different weapons, attacks/skill options, along with clothes and overall aesthetic of the characters. Right side, which is explained a little down below is gonna be more swift and agile, talking like magic and staffs, while the left is more axe and long swords. Each side has its perks where it could be that one side is more skilled in trading with different colonies while the other side is better at hunting and getting money or building. All this can be explained at the beginning of the game before you even load into the map to see what players would like to settle their adventure with

Notable Locations:

Two colonies, one huge forest on the top north side where you can hunt and maybe build mystery bases, theres a common trade center in the middle between both colonies.

(Left side) - more rough, bearded and overall just more big and muscular

(Right Side) - More casual, fitted, strict, uptight and arrogant.

The boats can be used by either side, the right side is gonna have bigger boards and better storage and transportation. Other details I could add would be a larger goal, something players can work towards, like to conquer the other colonies, not just the ones shown on the map but theoretically if the map was bigger your goal could be just conquer, But I think it would be more fun if the goal was broken up into more tiny pieces, easier to digest and understand, like getting certain weapons, meeting certain people around the map, doing certain bosses that can only be found in caves or mountains that progress you through the game. Giving you certain items that allow you to help with the journey

Encounters:

The tasks the players could do is to get on a boat and travel, trade in the trade center, invade the other colony depending on which one he picks, and also fght or hunt.

- A challenge is to not get conquered by the other side and to try your best to survive, you can’t really trust a lot of people and always have to be aware of your surroundings
- To go into more detail on everything, the main character you chose can either be on the right side or left side of the map.

- Whichever side you chose you have the options to upgrade your gear by hunting in the woods/mountains to trade later on in the game, another is by fighting which can be usual done in the middle where the mountains are or the little camps on each side that you can try and help take over. Another way is to buy a boat and sail to other little islands nearby not on this section of the map, the map here that is in the picture is just the spawn map.

Converting this into a playable game (table top)

DND feeling

Definitley going to be turned base, with different outcomes based on the choices that you make.

- Hp bars
- Hunger
- Emotional levels giving characters greater strength/weakness

Currency that allows characters to trade for items,clothing, potions.

Magic

Magic could be something really cool to implement into the game, giving more depth to different classes and character selection

Overall main goal

The overall main goal should be to leave these two colonies, this could be like a starting point for players, the center iceberg with the trading center should be your main goal, either spawn in on left or right side with the option to invade the other to gain GOLD, which is the most important progressive item that allows you to buy a boat and sail away from these lands
